The scam originated with the image on the left. A 'Melissa' answered the call when I called the Sydney number. She then proceeded to 'hook' me with her sales pitch about the 'almost free' vacation. Having read to me everything that was already on my computer screen, she handed me over to a 'Kevin Morris' – supposedly the 'Reservations Manager' of Calypso Cay in Florida. He ran through 'very vehemently' his version of the 'offer' which was a duplicate of the 'Melissa' conversation earlier. As I persisted about wanting to verify the credibility of this 'offer' and prize, he became aggressive and assertive, saying "it is my turn to speak, you called us, we didn't and that should confirm that we are bonafide". I continued to seek verification, he then hung up on me. I hope others who have experienced such an event, were either not interested and hung up willingly or badgered the person on the other side of the phone until they hung up themselves; ultimately not taking the 'bait'. By the way, the 90 minute tour was mandatory upon arrival at Calypso Cay. Please don't fall for this, in fact, tell them that you will call them back – find the number through other known legitimate organisations and this will quell any doubts. Good luck, and BE AWARE, please.
